Suit Asks $1.5 Million In Death

By PETER BARRETT VERNON — The family of a Mansfield man, who died after receiving electric shock therapy at the Natchaug Hospital in Mansfield last year, is seeking $1.5 million in damages from the hospital and staff members, according to a lawsuit filed Tuesday in Tolland County Superior Court.

Bringing the suit is Philip A. Monty, the son and estate-executor of Percy A. Monty, who was 58 years old at the time of his death about an hour after receiving shock therapy Feb. 24, 1976. The suit claims the hospital's actions directly resulted in the death of Monty, who had sustained respiratory problems after a previous electric shock therapy.

Also named as defendants, beside the private psychiatric hospital, are Dr. Olga A.G. Little, Dr. Mervyn H. Little and Dr. John Duers, who were present when the therapy was administered.

The lawsuit claims that Monty, a retired Army lieutenant colonel and a management education specialist at the Pratt & Whitney Aircraft Group, was admitted to the hospital Feb. 11, 1976, for rest and treatment of his depression.

His wife, Mrs. Natalie Monty, informed Olga Little and Duers that her husband had received electric shock therapy in 1972 and after that treatment had extreme difficulty in regaining his breathing, the suit states.

At Natchaug, the suit states, Monty received two convulsive doses of electric shock and a sustained nonconvulsive shock and failed to regain any breathing function. The hospital listed the cause of death as respiratory failure, the suit states.

Monty was in good physical health and his depressed condition and mental state showed improvement during his confinement, the suit states.

The suit claims the hospital and staff were negligent in failing to properly diagnose Monty's condition and determine whether electric shock therapy would be safe. It also claims the hospital failed to have present the proper operating room equipment and a certified anesthesiologist.

4 Suspects Bound Over In Kidnap

TORRINGTON — Four persons arrested Saturday in connection with the kidnaping in Salisbury Saturday of a Phoenix, Ariz., man, were bound over to Superior Court after pleas of innocent were entered for them in Common Pleas Court 18.

Michael Rice 16, of Rt. 44, Salisbury; Ray W. Stackon, 18, of Lower Road, North Canaan; Robert Miller, 18, of Granite Avenue, North Canaan; and Wyatt Earp Van-Hoosen, 21, of Echo Street, Salisbury, were charged with first-degree kidnaping, first-degree robbery, second-degree larceny and second-degree criminal mischief.

Police say the four kidnaped John Zbell at knife point and drove him in his car over the New York State border. They were arrested Saturday after Zbell escaped unharmed and told police.

State police said the four apparently "needed a car" for the night and by chance chose Zbell as their victim. They approached Zbell as he was leaving a Salisbury store and, holding a knife to his throat and claiming a .45-caliber automatic pistol was aimed at him, drove off with him as a captive, state police said.

No pistol was found by state police after the suspects' arrest.

After Zbell escaped, the four smashed open the trunk and cut up the car's upholstery when they discovered they had accidentally locked the car keys in the trunk.

Stackon, VanHoosen, and Miller Monday were ordered held in lieu of $10,000 bond in the Community Correctional Center at Litchfield. Rice was released Monday on $1,000 bond.

No date has been set for their appearance in Superior Court.

Democratic Senate Leaders Hissed by Welfare Lobbyists

By IRENE DRISCOLL

Top Democratic State Senate leaders Tuesday were greeted with hisses and shouts of "promises, promises" from members of a Hartford organization angered by an agreement to limit state welfare benefit increases to 10 per cent.

Before they encountered the politicians in a State Capitol corridor, members of the Citizen Lobby, formed mainly around the welfare issue, held a news conference and accused Hartford's top two legislators of "reneging" on promises to support increases higher than the 10 per cent.

John Murphy, a spokesman for the lobby, charged the Hartford legislative leaders were party to a "cynical manipulation of budget figures" by the Grasso Administration that is aimed at producing a pre-election surplus for 1978.

Murphy contended the state's surplus will exceed administration forecasts, and allow a 20 per cent raise in welfare benefits. A 20 per cent rise would boost welfare to 1974 standards of what it costs a poor family to live.

The 10 per cent raise was agreed to Monday in a meeting of top Democratic legislative leaders, including Hartford's State Senate President Pro Tem Joseph J. Fauliso and House Speaker James J. Kennelly with Democratic members of the legislature's Appropriations Committee.

The raise means $3 million more than Gov. Grasso's original 5 per cent welfare increase proposal, was part of a $40-million package of additions to the budget.

Most of the $40 million already has been endorsed by the governor.

But the 10 per cent is half what Fauliso had said he would shoot for just one-fourth what Kennelly had said he wanted.

The demonstrators missed Kennelly, but Fauliso, on his way from his office to the Democratic Senate caucus room, was confronted by the crowd. He didn't stop and later said he would not comment "when there is hysteria."

He later said the welfare issue is still "in negotiations" and that it would not be settled until the Appropriations Committee votes on the overall budget, scheduled for Thursday.

Although outnumbered in the leadership meeting Monday, several urban Democratic members of the Appropriations Committee disseminated on the package.

Some said they will try in Thursday's meeting to work with minority Republicans to boost the welfare benefits higher.

But convincing enough Republicans on the committee to go along was considered a long shot Tuesday.

Off-Duty Trooper Initiates Capture

By THOMAS D. WILLIAMS

An off-duty state trooper, shopping in a downtown Hartford jewelry store with his wife and two daughters, spotted a street fight, rushed outside to break it up and helped city police capture two suspects Tuesday afternoon.

Trooper Stephan Peruta said he was looking through a show window from the inside of Michaels Jewelers, 901 Main St., when he saw what he thought to be two men beating up a third man in the street.

As his wife and children watched in amazement, said Peruta, he rushed outside and pulled one of the "attackers, who turned out to be a woman" off the victim, a security guard. In the meantime, said Peruta, the second "attacker" fled.

Peruta said he ran after the suspect, while a Hartford policeman caught the woman. When he lost sight of the suspect, said Peruta, a bystander told him the man had ducked quickly into Michaels Jewelers.

Peruta returned to the shop, caught sight of the suspect, and after a slight struggle, captured him, said police.

As it turned out, said Peruta, the man being assaulted was Michael LaPorte, a security guard for Luettgens Ltd., who suspected the two assailants of trying to steal.

Arrested in the incident, which occurred about 12:45 p.m., were Earl Coleman, 21, of 60 Simpson St. and Kimerice Peters, 20, of 80 Nahum Drive. Coleman was released on a $5,000 bond in Court of Common Pleas 14, while Ms. Peters was being held on the same bond.

Coleman was charged with second-degree assault, fourth-degree larceny and attempted third-degree larceny. He is scheduled for a court appearance on May 10. Ms. Peters was charged with third-degree assault and attempted third-degree larceny.

Judge Delays Trial In Gambling Case

By ANDREW KREIG

The trial in Hartford's federal court of three men accused of extortion and large-scale gambling was postponed Tuesday for a week.

The delay was ordered by the judge because one of the defendants, Lawrence DiBenedetto of Bloomfield, hired a new law firm late last week.

Chief U.S. District Court Judge T. Emmet Clarie said the new firm would need a week to acquaint itself with the facts of the case, in which a special grand jury indicted 25 persons last spring.

The grand jury said the defendants were involved in or knew about a Hartford gambling business said to gross a million dollars a year.

Evidence in the case was gathered by a telephone wiretap and Connecticut's first court-approved secret entry by authorities to install a listening bug.

Michael T. O'Brien of 180 Bond St., Hartford, and Anthony D. Volpe of 157 South Main St., West Hartford, face charges of racketeering, extortion, gambling and conspiracy. Volpe also faces a charge of tampering with a witness.

DiBenedetto, who lives at 27 Kelsey Place, faces only the extortion and gambling and conspiracy charges.

Several trials in the case are presently scheduled, with the first — that of O'Brien, Volpe and DiBenedetto — expected to take about three weeks.
