In honor of President's Day, introducing, high as the balls on a giraffe (in Massachusetts), your next President of these United States: Jim Flannery. AMA, though, please also tell me something you would want the next President to know.

Reddit's automated bots frequently filter posts it thinks might be spam.

EDIT: pardon the poorly parsed post title, though potent + let them know we'll keep this boat afloat till midnight in Hawaii (according to what [ ] watch, Jim?)

Proof: <https://jim-flannery.com/wp-content/uploads/2023/02/reddit.jpg>

Going for a walk, will begin answering questions upon return, and, yes, the same [ ] from Trump's skating rink and Lafayette Square will be the one answering them.

Naturally, this will be our/my first time partaking in such activities, but, it seems wise in order to prepare for the role.

For more about "our" and "my," please refer to the teachings of more than one [ ] voice hearer(s).

Thanks, Josh, for the title. Sorry for blowing up your spot in LB.

Plus, a special thanks to our friends at the N.S.A. who would never be mistaken for Secret Service, of course, for taking President's Day off, though, if that's true, who the [ ] is protecting....

I had a hard time parsing the post title, I assume that's a yes.

Why are you running for president? Do you think you'll win? Are you running with a party? Do you care if you win or do you want to steer the conversation in a direction.

And I would want the next president to know that if a cure for ADHD were found, simple as laziness. There are psychiatically understood reasons why people underperform in the work place, and the idea that some people just don't want to work hard is becoming outdated.

The demands on the american worker and commercial and enterprise technology have been trending towards a work environment that is increasingly hostile to people with ADHD. The more hostile it becomes, the more people are going to be diagnosed with ADHD. We're creating an environment that is built to demotivate workers, and if something isn't done, there's going to be a labor crisis of motivation which our leaders won't know how to talk about, because it's a completely different paradigm from the sort which are held by the type of personalities that are called to win elections and lead.

That's what I would say if I had the ear of the American President. But I would take more time to say it more clearly, it's just I'm at work right now.

Why are you running for president?

"Why not?" could be a snarky, yet fair answer. Linking to essentially the same question from an episode of my/our telenovela may be thorough as [ ]. Somewhere, there is an answer in the middle between these two versions of an answer, though, maybe there isn't, the answer may lie somewhere on the outside. If that reply doesn't remind you of a song lyric, which song aren't you listening to right now?

Do you think you'll win?

If I say I think I'll win, or that we think we'll win, then I or we could risk expressing what may be interpreted as a delusion. Ironically, the 'we' being referred to could be, who knows? Bullshit answer? What if I were to say that I/we know with 100% certainty that I/we are going to win, because it's a rigged game?

Are you running with a party?

Negative.

Do you care if you win or

How could one not care if they win or not?

do you want to steer the conversation in a direction.

This is a bloody interesting one, mate. As you may or may not be aware, part of this niggas policies, is to veto 100% of bills, thus, one might thinking that they are a lame duck ass President and their only role could possibly be to exist to steer the conversation. That's not necessarily, the case, however, though, as we'll mention soon, you are the one steering the conversation (in fact, they already did, Jim) simply by having the courage to step up to the digital circus here, and ask a question that would somehow induce me/us to answer in a way that somehow steers the conversations ourself(ves). (Nope, not machine elves, nigga, nor ChatGPT right here and now) i suppose, simply by not replying in any way to what you shared after this question, i may or may not be steering it, yet I/we can't resist asking you the question: "What is ADHD, nigga?"

Hi Jim(s), I hope you're all doing well. Finding an email from you in my inbox is always a treat; over the past year your content has been unpredictable but interesting nonetheless. I'm curious, though, as to what you've been up to? Stay safe out there,

Your friend from PL

Let's treat that as a question.

What haven't we been up to?

Certainly not bypassing the FEC in any way shape or form by raising money for Irish Golf anymore than we're sending condolences by selling the only remaining Artifact from the Buttonwood Saga \(wtf?\).

I suppose to be safe I should at least pretend to have forgotten to include the saddest ever variation of "Jim Flannery for President" since it's the most impossible thing for any nugnut to vocalize, apparently: <https://jim-flannery.com/for-president/>

You got us there, PL.

Then again, who in PL doesn't know?

Let's assume this isn't a copycat question from an earlier poster intentionally testing our integrity right now.

No, it's clearly not Larry David, Jim, we already cleared that up with our friends at the NSA earlier (what, no mention?)

The lame fucking answer, Jim, "what haven't we been up to these days"?

WITHOUT mentioning Tom Fucking Hanks, Jim, because of our friends at the NSA.

Even if we say "don't leave the seat up or do leave the seat up" - yep, that's what we've been doing, then. We've been contemplating that question, since, of course, we're not the fucking devil either. Neither? Neither, neither, fucking, neither.

The brackets, Jim.

Censorship? Shouldn't we not use should when we say "shouldn't we leave that to reddit or the moderators or - or???"

Who can't we trust right now, Jim?

The dude typing on the keyboard?

No, Jim, the [] in the other room.

really?

don't even.

With that kind of grammar?

Why don't you just mention that we co-authored a screenplay recently and leave it at that without even considering that reddit and/or their moderators, Jim, simply will not allow our screenplay title to be displayed on their precious [] website even if, and only if(?), it's marked NSFW.

nigga, you did not

don't act like you didn't too
